I love education, and I’ve always wanted to be a teacher. The double degree programme allows me to study both language studies and education in English at the same time. It has given me the opportunity to have a great career.

The programme I am studying has provided me with new and different perspectives for viewing the world, and encourages me to analyse the morality of governments around the world. It has also taught me to enjoy learning at my own pace, which has helped increase my motivation and ability to achieve my goals.

Research and Knowledge Transfer
Research and Knowledge Transfer

Tapping its established niche in Education and newly emerging strength in multidisciplinary subject areas, the University has advanced knowledge boundaries through its research. The knowledge created is applied and transferred to benefit the education community and beyond.

The increase in research capacity in recent years, emphasising interdisciplinary and multidisciplinary research, positions the University as one of the most competitive of the eight publicly funded local tertiary institutions in Education, the Humanities and the Social Sciences.

Education innovation, education technology and social innovation are the strategic foci of knowledge transfer (KT) in the University. The University matches its professional expertise with that of its external partners to develop application-oriented collaborative KT projects that can have a social impact. The University has embedded a strong KT culture by delivering continuing professional development (CPD) courses; arranging commissioned, contracted, partnership and consultancy projects; organising local and international professional conferences, professional seminars and workshops; and engaging in social, community and cultural events. These courses, projects and events collectively incorporate entrepreneurship into the students’ development.

4 University- and 10 Faculty-level centres for research

Our academics and researchers have been undertaking ongoing projects with HK$111.8 million in funding provided by the Research Grants Council and other funding bodies*, which bears testament to our research capacity as a young and thriving university.

* Other funding bodies include Central Policy Unit (CPU), Food and Health Bureau (FHB), Standing Committee on Language Education and Research (SCOLAR), Innovation and Technology Commission (ITC) and Environmental Protection Department (EPD).
Throughout the years, the University has developed an extensive network of partnerships and collaboration with government agencies, nongovernmental organisations and universities across the globe. This includes exchange opportunities, joint degree programmes, consultancy projects, and research and knowledge transfer projects. This collaboration has mutual benefits for EdUHK and its partners in fostering cross-cultural and multicultural understanding, putting each side’s expertise to good use, and creating opportunities for knowledge creation, sharing and application.

Hall Life
The University accords high importance to hall life, which is regarded as an indispensable part of whole-person development. There are four on-campus student hostels – Northcote Hall (NH), Grantham Hall (GH), Robert Black Hall (RBH), and the Jockey Club Student Quarters (JCSQ). The first three are named after the previous Colleges of Education. These facilities provide about 2,200 residential places for full-time undergraduate and postgraduate students.

Each student hostel is under the leadership of a warden, supported by a senior tutor, hall manager and student hall tutors, who oversee hall life educational development, as well as daily operations.

My independence, self-learning and problem-solving skills were enhanced through participation in RBH’s overseas study tour. I was motivated by the philosophy ‘Learning beyond the classroom’ to participate in the tour organisation committee. Throughout the process, I learned to be a giver. Starting from scratch, I experienced the unity of RBH and learned to respect differences and strive for consensus.
