An Invitation from Plymouth State University

Plymouth State University invites you to attend the First Year Seminar Poster Symposium on the main floor of Lamson Library during finals week (December 18 - 22). For those of you who were able to attend the Legislators Brunch, the posters on display are the final posters of not only the students who presented on December 4 but all First Year students. You may have an opportunity to speak directly with students about their work.

This year, faculty redesigned the First Year Seminar to have students focus on real and generally unanswerable societal problems. The aim of the class is to help students develop four critical habits of mind (purposeful communication, problem solving, integrated perspectives, and self-regulated learning) in a collaborative experiential process that will prepare them for the world after graduation.

This semester, First Year Seminar students have been working to address some aspect of a “wicked problem”. They are presenting their work, during final exam week, in a poster symposium on the main floor of Lamson Library. The posters will be displayed for this entire week, where you may have an opportunity to speak with students about their work. The posters will continue to be on display January 2 – 5.

Everyone is invited to the symposium. Please come by during Library hours to read the posters.

If you have any questions about this program or other questions about Plymouth State, please contact Marcia Schmidt Blaine, mblaine@plymouth.edu.